Mental Health First Aid in Schools

Adolescence is a time of important change and development. It is also a time when mental health problems such as depression and anxiety first emerge.

During the high school years, mental health problems can negatively affect students' grades, attendance, relationships, physical and psychological development, all of which can have a lifelong impact.

Schools are an amazing source of support for teens and their families but they can also be a source of strain or stress, and it is often in schools where symptoms of mental health problems are first identified.

It is also important to remember that it's not only students that suffer from strain or stress in the school environment. For many teachers the day-to-day effects of managing student, co-worker and parent relationships, together with work and time pressures, can lead to both physical and mental problems.

This is where Mental Health First Aid® can help

Mental Health First Aid offers a suite of early-intervention education courses for young people and adults that increase mental health literacy and teach the practical skills needed to support someone experiencing a mental health problem.

Increasing mental health literacy within whole school communities through targeted training, helps increase teacher, staff and student resilience.

Mental Health First Aid (MHFA™) training equips people with the knowledge and confidence to approach or respond to staff members, students or peers who may need information or support. The impact of that first supportive conversation for any individual, and in particular a young person, in a time of need can be profound.

What is Mental Health First Aid?

Mental health first aid is the initial help offered to someone who is experiencing a mental health problem or a mental health crisis until appropriate professional help is received or the crisis resolves.

MHFA Training in Schools

There are 3 courses recommended for the secondary school setting:

Standard MHFA

Teaches adults to support staff members and other adults.

Youth MHFA

Teaches school staff, teachers, support workers, parents and other adults to support young people.

*MHFA courses are also available, to teach adults the skills to support Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander adults and young people.

Teen MHFA

Teaches students in Years 7–9 and 10–12 how to offer support to their peers and seek appropriate help from a trained adult where required.

It is important to note that Teen MHFA training can only be delivered once 10% of all staff have completed Youth MHFA training. The Teen MHFA course must also be delivered to a whole student cohort e.g. all Year 9 students.

“In my nine years of teaching this is probably the best and most useful Professional Development I have done.”

St Augustine's College Staff Member

It is estimated that in the last 12 months:

1 in 5

adults experienced a mental health problem

1 of 5

students received informal support from a school staff member for an emotional or behavioural problem¹

1 in 7

young people (aged 4–17) were assessed as having a mental disorder equating to 560,000 children and adolescents¹

Build Capacity in your School Community

Many schools are choosing to nominate staff to become Standard, Youth or Teen MHFA Instructors.

Our unique Instructor training model is a cost-effective and sustainable way to embed MHFA training within school communities. By funding staff members to become accredited MHFA Instructors, MHFA courses can then be delivered to staff, parents and students on an on-going basis.
